Broadcast Writing Style Guide

Version 22
FOREWORD

This is the 22nd edition of the Defense Information School Broadcast Writing Style Guide. The purpose for this style guide is to provide both an introduction and a reference for military broadcast journalists. The primary audience is DINFOS students at all levels learning the art of broadcast writing. We consider this guide a Standard Operating Procedure for them. Our intent is to include all Department of Defense members who write and prepare broadcast news releases, features, spots, and public service announcements for military and civilian media as the guide’s secondary audience.

We encourage both students and writers working in the field to use the margins we’ve provided to make notes.

Appendix B, the “sins” and “tips” of broadcast writing, is reprinted with permission from Writing Broadcast News; Mervin Block; Bonus Books, Inc., 160 East Illinois Street, Chicago, 1987.

Broadcast Writing:

You might argue it’s about words. You could contend it’s conceptual. You may claim it’s an art or an in-borne talent. Perhaps you’d say it doesn’t matter. What is “it”? “It” is broadcast writing, and it’s really not as complex as it may seem. It’s simply a communicative process. It’s a process so unique that Andy Rooney once said, “No one speaks as he writes or writes as he speaks; writing for broadcast is a compromise between the two.” It is unique but it can be learned. How? The same way you’d develop other skills – by repetition ... by practice ... by learning the rules and applying them until they become second nature – but never assumed. That’s where this style guide comes in. It’s your guide to improving your broadcast writing skills. Consider this a formal welcome to the wonderful world of broadcast writing!

Writing for the Ear:

David Brinkley once said that the ear is the least effective way to receive information. We may read well, and we may even receive the information we read well, but we’re terrible listeners. Listening is a totally different way to receive information. As a broadcast writer, your challenge is to format that information for your listeners’ ear so they can understand it the first – and most likely only – time they’ll hear it.

Note: Beware of “it”! It may be a vague pronoun! Also “that” and “they.”
THE SIX “Cs”:

To help ensure you can successfully communicate using broadcast copy, you must learn and apply the six “Cs”: clear, concise, conversational, complete, current, and correct.

CLEAR:

You must ensure your audience understands your copy the first time they hear it. Your listener cannot go back and read it. Work at writing in a simple, understandable style; write to express an idea, not to impress your audience. Basically limit sentences to one main thought. Don’t make your listener work to understand your copy. Most won’t bother.

CONCISE:

Broadcast copy is short. You must learn to express many thoughts in few words. Thomas Jefferson once said, “The most valuable of all talent is that of never using two words when one will do.” Get to the main point. Use only essential words. Eliminate wordiness. Make your point and move on. It’s kind of frustrating to read wordy, redundant copy, isn’t it?

CONVERSATIONAL:

We basically “converse” using simple, common language. Why not write “for the ear” in the same style? Write a story much the same way you’d tell it to a friend. But, don’t forget our Andy Rooney quote from the previous page.

COMPLETE:

Your copy must answer the five Ws (who, what, when, where, and why), except, perhaps, “why.” That may be unknown at airtime. But don’t raise new questions or leave old questions unanswered.

CURRENT:

Current copy is timely copy – both in content and the way it sounds. Last week’s events, accidents, and incidents are not today’s news. One way you can make your copy sound much more timely is by using (but not forcing) one of the present verb tenses whenever it’s possible (and correct).
Correct:
You must ensure your copy is correct. One mistake could potentially ruin a career. That’s one reason why this is the most important “C.” Simply stated, your copy must be free of factual errors. Double check for correct names, dates, times, etc. And don’t forget that correct copy also means correct use of spelling and grammar. Learn the basic grammar rules, and use a dictionary.

Broadcast News Structure:
Broadcast news writing uses a different structure than print journalism. While the print journalist uses the inverted pyramid style, you’ll employ the upright pyramid style. Instead of the summary lead, including the who, what, when, where, and why of the story, you’ll focus on the central fact – or news peg – for your lead. Then, instead of using the print style of the facts in order of importance, you’ll round out your story by completing the five “W’s.” While the newspaper reporter might take 700 words to tell the story, you’ll often have no more than 75 to 80. That’s one reason why radio is considered the “alerting” or “headline” medium, newspapers the “informing” medium, and television (the dual-channel medium) the “involving” or “emotional” medium.

Constructing the Broadcast Sentence:
Not only does story structure differ between print and broadcast journalism, so does the sentence structure within the story. You must learn to write in a more direct, conversational style. That means generally NOT starting a sentence with a long phrase or subordinate clause – especially your lead. You may also have to slightly modify the punctuation rules you learned in grammar school, and you must look at word usage in new ways.

Word Choice:
Mark Twain once said, “There is as much difference between the right word and the almost-right word as between lightning and the lightning bug.” Always an important process, choosing the right word becomes even more critical when you’re writing for the ear.
VERBS:

The single most important word in a sentence is the verb. A verb is a word that expresses action, state, or condition. It provides the muscle in your sentence. Verbs come in various forms. There are transitive and intransitive verbs. Auxiliary verbs and main verbs combine to make a verb phrase. Linking verbs must have complements – they show a state or condition and do not convey action. Verbs can become participles (verbal adjectives) or gerunds (verbal nouns). Your main concern is using the verb correctly as dictated by considering tense, person, number, voice, and mood.

TENSE:

There are six main verb tenses:

- Present: THE COMMANDER ARRIVES TODAY.
- Past: THE COMMANDER ARRIVED LAST NIGHT.
- Future: THE COMMANDER WILL ARRIVE TOMORROW.
- Present Perfect: THE COMMANDER HAS ARRIVED.
- Past Perfect: THE COMMANDER HAD ARRIVED BEFORE....
- Future Perfect: THE COMMANDER WILL HAVE ARRIVED....

The present tense provides a general statement of fact (“The race starts at 9:00 Saturday morning) or indicates an action is happening now (“The lead runners are heading into the final turn.”). It is the preferred tense for use in broadcast writing … but don’t “force” it by using the “false present” (“Last night’s fire injures five servicemembers.”) or you’ll confuse your audience. Use the past tense when you tie an event to a point in the past, but don’t confuse past tense with passive voice, which is caused by sentence structure. The future tense indicates the event has not yet taken place. You can often use the present tense in place of the future (as we did above). Since it ties an action to the present, the present perfect is the second most preferred tense. Use it to make a past action sound more current. You will rarely use the past perfect tense, and the future perfect tense has become all but obsolete.
PERSON:

Person refers to changes in the verb form according to its use in the first, second, or third person. For example:

- I run every morning. (1st person)
- You run every morning. (2nd person)
- He/she/it runs every morning. (3rd person)

Note that the verb form changes in the third person when compared to the first or second person.

NUMBER:

Number indicates whether the subject is singular or plural. For instance:

- We run on the track. (1st person plural)
- You run on the track. (2nd person plural)
- They run on the track. (3rd person plural)

Note that form remains the same as we conjugate the plural form of the verb, but also note that third person plural differs from third person singular.

VOICE:

Voice refers to the relationship between the action, agent/actor, and recipient. Is the agent/actor performing the verb’s action or is it being acted upon?

What is the direction of the verb’s action? Consider the following examples:

- Active: THE THIEF STOLE THE HANDBAG.

- Passive: THE HANDBAG WAS STOLEN BY THE THIEF.

Note the two separate factors that distinguish the above examples. First, in the active voice example, the action flows from the thief (agent) to the handbag (object). Also, the verb is past tense but has no auxiliary verb. In the passive example, the object becomes the “subject,” and the actor follows the verb. The action flows in the opposite direction. A form of the “to be” verb is used as an auxiliary verb. Formed correctly, passive voice always has a verb phrase consisting of a form of the “to be” verb and a past participle.
To Be Verbs

The forms of the verb “to be” include:

- am,
- are,
- is,
- was,
- were,
- be,
- been,
- and being.

Active Voice Advantages:

Active voice has several advantages. For instance, it is more concise and more conversational. Active voice is stronger and clearer in meaning. Conversely, passive voice generally results in wordy, dull sentences.

Identifying Passive Voice:

You must learn to recognize passive voice before you can correct it. Consider the following three step process:

1. Identify the verb.
2. Identify who or what is performing the verb’s action.
3. Identify the direction of the action.

For example:

THE HELICOPTER WAS LANDED BY THE MARINE.

We identify the verb (was landed), recognize the performer of the action (Marine), and we follow the direction of the action (→). This sentence is in the passive voice. Consider another passive voice example:

THE THIEF WAS ARRESTED BY THE POLICEMAN.

Locating the verb phrase (was arrested) and the actor (policeman) allows us to again identify the action’s direction (→). But passive sentence structure doesn’t always include an actor. The above examples might have read:

THE HELICOPTER WAS LANDED.

THE THIEF WAS ARRESTED.

The action is in the same direction; the sentences are still in the passive voice.

Practice recognizing passive voice by evaluating these sentences:

- THE MARATHON WAS WON BY THE MASTER SERGEANT.
- THE CAR STRUCK THE SAILOR IN THE LEG.
- THE TRIAL WAS INTERRUPTED BY THE JUDGE.
- THE FAMILY MEMBERS WERE NOTIFIED.
- THE INSTRUCTOR HAS LEFT SCHOOL FOR THE DAY.
- A CROWD OF 20-THOUSAND SPECTATORS IS EXPECTED.
Restructuring Passive Voice Sentences:

To restructure a passive voice sentence, you must:

1. Identify it!
2. Relocate the actor or identify the missing actor and insert it into the sentence.
3. Change the verb.

For example:

THE COLONEL WAS BITTEN BY THE DOG.

is replaced by:

THE DOG BIT THE COLONEL.

You determine the first sentence is in the passive voice by identifying the verb (verb phrase is “was bitten”), recognizing who is performing the action (the dog), and following the direction of the action (the dog to the Colonel). To change from passive to active, restructure the sentence. Put the actor in front of the verb, drop the “to be” verb, and change the past participle to the simple past tense form of the verb. Inserting the missing actor could be more difficult. You first must determine who’s performing the action. For example:

THE HEADQUARTERS FLAG WAS STOLEN.

Before you can reconstruct this sentence, you must determine the missing actor. In this case, even if you don’t know who stole the flag, you may still “insert the missing actor”:

A THIEF STOLE THE HEADQUARTERS FLAG.

You may also be able to simply change the verb:

THE GUN WAS SOUNDED AT NOON.

Becomes:

THE GUN FIRED AT NOON.

THE RACE WAS STARTED ON TIME.

Is less direct than:

THE RACE STARTED ON TIME.

Note:

Be careful when you change the verb – you might end up changing the meaning of the sentence, e.g., “The boy was bitten by the dog”; cannot become, “The boy bit the dog.”
When It’s OK to Use Passive Voice:

There are some instances when passive voice is preferred over active voice. For instance, when it’s a traditional phrase normally spoken in the passive voice:

He was born in 1952.

When the “actor” is unknown or you want to hide the actor’s identity:

The boy was rescued from the burning car.

The door was left unlocked. (By me!)

When the receiver of the action is clearly more important than the actor:

The president has been shot. (OR)

The writing instructor has been fired.

Mood:

Refer to the grammar appendix for information on the indicative, imperative and subjunctive moods.

---

Choosing Simple Words:

Writing for the Ear:

Writing for the ear means using words that are conversational and easily understood. For example, would you ask to “utilize” or “use” the computer? Do you ask someone to “consummate” a form or “complete” it? Would you report on a “conflagration” or a “fire”? Writing for the ear means using those same simple words when you write for your audience.
NEGATIVE WORD CHOICE:

Would you rather be told to write in a positive manner or not to write in a negative manner? If you’re like most people, you’ll react more positively if you’re told to write in a positive manner. Tell your audience about the general’s plans to stay at his home station instead of his promise NOT to go anywhere. Replacing phrases like “did not remember” with “forgot” also adds to the conversational style and removes the possibility that the “not” will somehow not reach your listener’s ear.

CLICHÉS:

How many times have we heard a newscaster use the phrase “autopsy to determine the cause of death”? How many wasted words are in the phrase “in the month of February”? Is it really necessary to say “in the city of….”?

OTHER MEANINGLESS WORDS:

Some other meaningless words include conjunctive adverbs – like meanwhile, meantime, and incidentally. Don’t rely on these crutches as transitions. Work on a more natural flow of ideas. And don’t forget to avoid latter, former, and respectively. Your listener can’t refer back to your original reference.

JARGON AND SLANG:

To you “R and R” might mean “rest and relaxation,” but to someone else it might be the name of their hometown bowling alley. And which term sounds more professional, “re-up” or “re-enlistment”? Would the civilians in your audience more easily understand “2100 hours” or “this evening at 9:00”? Avoid using jargon, slang, and military time.

FOREIGN PHRASES:

Also, beware of foreign phrases. Some of the better known words or phrases common to the country you’re stationed in might complement your spot or feature script quite nicely, but they’ll probably detract from your hard news story. They could also totally confuse your listener.
CONTRACTIONS:

We use contractions naturally in day-to-day conversations. “It’s” replaces “it is” and “there is” becomes “there’s.” Contractions also add to the conversational delivery of broadcast copy. There are exceptions. One is the use of it’ll, which sounds awkward in a broadcast sentence. Also, remember that contractions tend to de-emphasize words. If you must emphasize a word, do not contract it. Someone in your audience could easily miss the key part in the statement, “The jury has declared that the defendant isn’t guilty.” There are other examples you must evaluate on a case-by-case basis.

PRONOUNS:

Beware of vague pronouns. When you use a pronoun in broadcast copy, be sure its antecedent is clear. If there is any chance of confusion, repeat the noun the pronoun replaces.

“HERE” AND “THERE”:

Where are here and there to your audience? Is here inside the radio studio? To your listener, isn’t here where they are at that moment? The wider your broadcast area, the greater the possibility of confusion. Whether “here” is Fort Meade or “there” is Fort Meade, just say Fort Meade. These references are acceptable in video if they are accompanied by visual images (e.g., someone pointing or referring to a map).

ALLITERATION AND SIBILANCE:

If you compose a sentence with several words beginning with the same letter, you have alliteration that needlessly challenges the announcer. For example:

WESTERLY WINDS WILL WHIP WINDSOR WEDNESDAY.

You’d have a similar problem with sibilance, which is alliteration with an “s”:

SEVEN SLIMEY SNAKES SLOWLY SLITHERED SOUTHWARD.

Sibilance can also appear at the end of words ... especially when you have a series of words that use an apostrophe to show possession:

THE AIRMAN’S HAT COVERS THE LIEUTENANT’S DESK.
ACRONYMS:

Your audience no doubt knows what NASA, NATO, and even OPEC are, but have they ever heard of DINfos? Be sure you spell out an unfamiliar acronym when you use it for the first time.

THE DEFENSE INFORMATION SCHOOL, OR DINfos . . . .

This example illustrates one of the few times it’s beneficial to split a sentence’s subject and verb with a clarifying phrase.

ABBREVIATIONS:

It’s quiz time. Guess what the following abbreviations stand for: GySgt, bros., SMSgt, Pres., CPO, IA. Chances are you did not immediately know the abbreviations stand for Gunnery Sergeant, brothers, Senior Master Sergeant, President, Chief Petty Officer, and Iowa. Chances are the person reading your copy won’t know either. The abbreviated words you should use consist of titles of personal address: Mr., Mrs., Ms., and Dr. They also include common names and titles like Y-M-C-A, C-I-A, C-B-S, and N-C-O-I-C.

Whatever you do, don’t presume the person reading your copy knows that USAF means U-S Air Force or Ft. means fort. Write them out.

INITIALS AND MIDDLE NAMES:

Omit a person’s middle initial unless the letter is part of a well-known name, like Michael J. Fox, Harry S. Truman, John F. Kennedy, or George C. Scott.

FINDING THE RIGHT WORD:

If the defendant in a murder trial is acquitted, is it the same as saying he’s innocent? Should you really call that female in your radio spot announcement “chick” or a “babe”? Babe may be a compliment for you, but does it carry a positive meaning to all members of your audience? Experts estimate that as much as 75% of meaning is lost in the communication process. You need to minimize misunderstanding, so carefully consider the right word that carries the meaning you want your audience to receive.

Note:

The bottom line is ... know your audience!
Sentence Structure:

Keep sentence structure simple – basically one idea to one sentence. Edit your compound-complex sentence down to two or three simple sentences. Think about it – if your sentence wanders, what does that do to your listener’s attention? Consider the following:

AN AIR FORCE HELICOPTER AND A NAVY FIGHTER JET COLLIDED AT APPROXIMATELY 3:40 THIS AFTERNOON AT 35-HUNDRED FEET 40 MILES NORTH OF TYNDALL AIR FORCE BASE NEAR PANAMA CITY, FLORIDA, KILLING BOTH PILOTS, WHO WERE 30-YEARS OLD AND 27-YEARS OLD RESPECTIVELY.

That lead sentence is full of facts, but does the way the writer jammed the facts into one sentence make sense to your listener? Probably not. How would you rewrite that sentence using a simpler structure? Perhaps:

AN AIR FORCE HELICOPTER AND A FIGHTER JET COLLIDED THIS AFTERNOON NEAR TYNDALL AIR FORCE BASE, KILLING BOTH PILOTS.

Sentence Length:

Follow the 20/25 rule, which limits news story leads to 20 words and all other sentences to 25 words. But also remember to vary your sentence length. If you constantly write short sentences, your copy will sound choppy. If you always write long, wordy sentences, your copy will drag. Try to develop a rhythm by combining short and long sentences.

Participial Phrases:

Avoid starting a sentence with a participial phrase. And rarely start a story with one. You’re backing into the story if you do. It’s normally best to establish the subject at the beginning of your sentence. For instance:

BEGINNING THIS WEEK, THE CHAPEL WILL START HOLDING SUNDAY EVENING SERVICES.
Instead, try:

THE CHAPEL WILL START HOLDING SUNDAY EVENING SERVICES THIS WEEK.

When you do start a sentence with a participial phrase, the subject of the main sentence must match the preceding phrase.

Clauses:

You must also remember to remain clear and conversational in your use of clauses. For instance, normal print sentence structure often finds a dependent clause preceding an independent clause.

BECAUSE HE JOINED THE MARINES AT AN EARLY AGE, THE STAFF SERGEANT HAD THE OPPORTUNITY TO EXCEL.

But, to the ear, it’s clearer and more natural to write:

THE STAFF SERGEANT HAD THE OPPORTUNITY TO EXCEL BECAUSE HE JOINED THE MARINES AT AN EARLY AGE.

And beware of separating a sentence’s subject and verb with a non-essential clause.

THE AIR BASE GROUP COMMANDER, WEARY FROM LONG HOURS OF NEGOTIATING IN THE NATION’S CAPITAL, SAYS SHE’S HAPPY TO BE HOME.
Why not restructure your sentence or divide the sentence into two separate sentences?

WEARY FROM LONG HOURS OF NEGOTIATING IN THE NATION’S CAPITAL, THE AIR BASE GROUP COMMANDER SAYS SHE’S HAPPY TO BE HOME.

THE AIR BASE GROUP COMMANDER SAYS SHE’S WEARY BUT HAPPY TO BE HOME AFTER LONG HOURS OF NEGOTIATING IN THE NATION’S CAPITAL.

THE AIR BASE GROUP COMMANDER IS WEARY FROM LONG HOURS OF NEGOTIATING IN THE NATION’S CAPITAL.

SHE SAYS SHE’S HAPPY TO BE HOME.

Remember that it’s better to use simple, declarative sentences with simple subject-verb-object order. Also remember, to avoid confusion, generally place dependent clauses after independent clauses.

PUNCTUATION:

Use punctuation in your broadcast script to aid readability and clarify meaning. Do this by following the same basic rules you learned in grammar school, with a few exceptions. For instance, you’ll add the otherwise optional comma prior to the coordinating conjunction in a series of three or more. This helps clarify meaning. The comma is just one of seven different forms of broadcast punctuation. The others include the period, comma, hyphen, dash, quotation mark, parenthesis, and ellipsis. You may also use the exclamation point, but not in a “hard news” story. DINFOS style does not employ either the colon or the semi-colon.

A period indicates the end of a sentence or thought. Stop – breathe – move on. Be sure to place two spaces after each period in your broadcast script.

A comma indicates a pause shorter than a period. Continue to use commas to set off names of geographical areas and most items in dates and addresses.
The hyphen helps you phrase difficult words and separate elements.

RE-APPLY, RE-EVALUATE, W-B-I-G, U-C-L-A, A-M

Do not hyphenate or divide words at the end of a line. Spell out the entire word, or move it to the next line.

Use the dash to set off parenthetical expressions.

UNESCO – THE UNITED NATIONS EDUCATIONAL, SCIENTIFIC, AND CULTURAL ORGANIZATION – MET....

Type the dash as two hyphens placed together with a space on both sides (the hyphen is a single stroke with no space on either side). Microsoft Word will automatically combine the two hyphens into a slightly longer dash.

Use quotation marks to indicate quotes, or set off nicknames, book or movie titles, or any “cute” phrase that might create a stumble for the announcer.

THE U-H-ONE “HUEY” IS A VIETNAM-ERA, UTILITY HELICOPTER USED FOR TRANSPORTING ....

Parentheses in broadcast copy contain unspoken information. You normally do not read material in parentheses aloud. Parenthetical information in broadcast copy includes notes to the announcer such as phonetics and a particular time (today, tomorrow, month, and day). In most cases, you won’t read this aloud.

MEET COMMANDER DIXIER (DEE-SEE-YAY) AT THE ....

THE ACTION STARTS FRIDAY (TOMORROW/TODAY) ....

THE FAIR BEGINS AT 1:00 SATURDAY (JUNE 4TH).

The ellipsis is a series of three dots indicating a pause longer than a comma. The pause is for dramatic effect. This pause is part of the colorful writing used in spots and features.

SHE NEVER FORGOT HER FAVORITE WRITING INSTRUCTOR ... MASTER SERGEANT TERRY MINTON.

You’ll very rarely use the exclamation point in broadcast writing. You might use it with the imperative mood in a selling spot, but you’d never use an exclamation point in a hard news story. Using an exclamation point in hard news improperly inserts your opinion into the story. That is editorializing.

Note:

Learn more about “mood” in the grammar appx.
Quotations and Attribution:

Your listener cannot see the quotation marks in your copy. If you feel you must use a direct quote, alert your listener it’s coming.

“I DID NOT GIVE THAT ORDER,” THE COLONEL SAID.

When your audience first hears that statement, they have no way of knowing it’s not the announcer claiming he didn’t give the order. There’s a good chance they’ll become confused and miss part of your story.

THE COLONEL SAID, IN HIS WORDS, “I DID NOT GIVE THAT ORDER.”

Unless the quote is very dynamic, you’ll probably want to paraphrase it.

THE COLONEL SAYS HE DID NOT GIVE THAT ORDER.

Remember to identify the source of your quote or paraphrase up front. Alert your audience that a quote is next, and begin the quote with the source.

You’ll also want to avoid using long quotes. Again, the best move you can make is to paraphrase. And if it’s necessary to link a second statement with the speaker, use a conversational, clarifying phrase.

THE COLONEL ALSO SAID . . . .

Some newscasters use “quote” and “unquote” to lead into and go out of quotes. That is un-conversational and unnecessary. When you begin your quote with the source, your listeners will understand who said what.

Instead of:

THE FIRE CHIEF SAID, QUOTE, “THE BLAZE STARTED IN THE KITCHEN.”

Why not say:

THE FIRE CHIEF SAYS THE BLAZE STARTED IN THE KITCHEN.

That way, you’re giving attribution to a key piece of information without dragging down the sentence – or your listener’s mind. Don’t worry about attributing the source if the facts are obvious or easily verified.
Titles and Names:

Avoid starting a broadcast story with a person’s name. Definitely avoid using the name of an unfamiliar individual unless you’re striving for a special effect – a very rare instance in news writing. When you use names and titles together, remember to put the title ahead of the name.

SECRETARY OF DEFENSE ROBERT GATES SAYS....

Instead of:

ROBERT GATES, SECRETARY OF DEFENSE, SAYS....

Notice that when you place the title before the name, you don’t use commas. Your sentence flows much more naturally and quickly.

Constructing the Broadcast News Story:

It bears repeating that the structure of a broadcast news story differs from a print story. The print story is written in the “inverted pyramid” style. The who, what, when, where, why, and how are usually included in the summary lead. The print journalist then unfolds the rest of the facts in descending order of importance. Conversely, you’ll write the broadcast story in the “upright pyramid” style. At the peak is the news peg – the single most important fact (what happened). You add the remaining four “Ws” and the how to the body to complete the news story.

The News Peg/Focus Statement:

Before you start to write your news story, pick the main actor, action, and recipient, and then use them to shape a focus statement. For example, in a public affairs broadcast release about a plane crash that killed seven airmen at Dover AFB, Delaware, you decide the main actor is “crash,” the main action verb is “kills,” and the recipient is “airmen.” Your focus statement becomes:

AIR CRASH KILLS SEVEN AIRMEN

Everything you write about this story should relate to your focus/news peg statement. If you write that three to ten word statement well, you can maintain the same structure – actor, action, and recipient – in your tease. This concept could also work well in your hard news lead.
The Slugline:

The slugline is a one to three word identifier that names the topic of the story. It is “topical” only; it does not contain any verbs.

The Tease:

The tease is a short, grammatically incorrect statement of up to ten words. It includes what happened and where it happened.

(Yes) DOVER AIR CRASH KILLS SEVEN AIRMEN

(No) AN AIR FORCE PLANE HAS CRASHED

Both examples consist of six words. The first example is localized (Dover AFB), the “what” is clearly spelled out (air crash and seven dead airmen), and the non-essential words (articles and helping verbs) are omitted. Like a newspaper headline, it’s common to write the “hard news” tease in the simple present tense.

The Lead:

Your lead sentence, which is the first sentence in a broadcast news story, is designed to gain the listeners’ attention, tell them what happened, and prepare them for what’s to come. Identifying the impact of the news peg on your audience can help you develop a solid lead sentence. The DINFOS standard for a lead sentence is 20 words or less.

A DOVER AIR FORCE BASE PLANE CRASH HAS KILLED SEVEN AIRMEN.

This lead is localized (Dover AFB), the “what” is included (plane crash), and the result is revealed (killed seven Airmen) ... all in well under 20 words! You’ve captured your listeners’ attention with the impact (military deaths), told them what happened, and prepared them for the rest of the facts. Notice how we did NOT write the lead:

SEVEN AIRMEN WERE KILLED IN A DOVER AIR FORCE BASE AIRCRAFT CRASH THIS MORNING.
This structure not only puts the key statistic (seven) in a place where your listeners (who may not be actively listening for the first word of the story) could miss it, it’s written in the passive voice (were killed).

You normally want to localize your lead. Stating the local tie brings a greater impact to your audience. The local media let the national networks handle the general wartime updates during “Operation Iraqi Freedom.” The local market stations focused on the impact the war had on their communities. You generally don’t use questions or quotations in hard news story leads. A question lead might make your copy read like a public service announcement, and a quotation lead is hard for your listener to tune in to. Save question leads for “soft news” and feature stories (except for the occasional rhetorical question as an attention-getting device), and paraphrase quotes important enough for the lead (unless it’s an extremely important quote like President Reagan’s “Mr. Gorbachev, tear down this wall” comment). Question and quotation leads may alert the listener to what’s ahead, but they generally lack the depth of a general “what happened” lead.

Finally, recognize the difference between hard and soft lead sentences and know when to use one over the other. Strongly consider using soft leads for lighter news stories and sports, e.g., instead of directly providing the game’s outcome....

The Bremerstein “Bearcats” continue to dominate the All-Europe Basketball League.
The Body:

After you’ve written the lead, work on logically developing the specifics of the story in the body. Logical development simply means presenting the facts in an orderly flow from the story’s start to the conclusion. Remember, you’re a storyteller. Try asking yourself what your listener wants to know next. Then deliver. Your development may or may not be in descending order of importance. Learn the art of transitioning between ideas without relying on crutches – like conjunctive adverbs. The body of the story must deliver the goods you’ve introduced in the lead. And, most of all, do not forget you’re writing for your listener’s ear, i.e., conversationally.

The “Conclusion”:

All stories have a beginning (lead), middle (body), and an end. We call the end of the news story the “Conclusion.” The conclusion is the last sentence in your story. It brings the story to a solid, logical end. It may contain a new fact, but a properly written conclusion never raises any new questions. Don’t underestimate its importance.
The Feature:

The feature story provides a change of pace in newscasts. Features are generally longer than “hard” news stories and most often focus on “soft-news” items. You’ll find feature ideas all around your installation. From the local sports hero or model airplane buff, to the opera singer, scholar, or scoutmaster, features concentrate on the human interest story angle. While you use very few, if any, modifiers in your “hard” news writing, features are a great opportunity to let your creative writing juices flow. These stories don’t have a hard news peg. They depend on your ability to use a kaleidoscope of description. Concentrate on using dynamic, intense, descriptive words with precise meanings. Continue to use action verbs in the active voice as you paint mental pictures.

THE FEATURE LEAD SENTENCE:

Attracting your listener’s attention is every bit as important in the feature story as it is in the “hard” news release. The feature story lead, or “attention step,” does not include the principle of telling “what” happened. This makes it even more critical to look for the best angle for the lead to attract your audiences’ interest and get them involved in your story.

THE FEATURE DEVELOPMENT:

Good features don’t just happen; you create them through skillful planning and writing. Features demand skillful development if you hope to make them effective. Pick a main idea and stick to it. Don’t sell your listener short by relying on transitional words and phrases. Work on smooth, logically developed transitions.

THE TELLING POINT:

Remember that all stories have a beginning, a body, and an end. We call the end – or final sentence – of the feature the “telling point.” It illustrates the central theme or information objective of your story and often “ties back” to the lead by paraphrasing or re-stating the same idea.

Note:
Remember, the final sentence in a “hard” news story is called the “conclusion.”
Note: Since you are trying to sell your audience on an idea, you’ll want to personalize your copy by using the 2nd person.

Spot Announcements:

What costs about three million dollars and lasts for less than 30 seconds? A commercial during the Super Bowl! Do you really think commercial advertisers would pay such large sums of money if they didn’t believe in the power of advertising? You’ve got that same power – the power of the television and radio spot announcement – at your disposal. The difference is that you’re generally selling a service or an idea instead of a product. Your job is to convince your audience to start exercising or stop smoking, not to drink a certain soft drink or beer.

Types of Spots:

The two types of spot announcements are selling and information. You tell your listener to take a specific action in the selling spot, but take more of a “soft-sell” approach in an information spot. You’ll want to be brief, keeping the sentence length short – no more than 20 words – in both types of spots.

Selling Spots:

The selling spot both informs your listeners and tells them to do something. A selling spot has three steps: attention, appeal, and action. The attention step must grab your listener’s attention and set the tone for the spot. It might contain a startling fact or statistic, a question, or a sound effect. Anything that gains your listeners’ attention and prepares them for what’s to come. The appeal step (body of the spot) tells your listeners what’s in it for them. It’s called the appeal step because you’ll address a specific appeal, or need, that your audience has. The action step demands some kind of activity. Even if you write to motivate your listener to some kind of action throughout the spot, include a specific call to action in the last sentence. It should be based on the message of the spot, not a catch-all “for more information.”

Note: The DINFOS standard for action steps is ten words or less.
INFORMATION SPOTS:
The information spot informs your listener without giving a direct call to action. Of course, the information you present should start your listener thinking about acting, though you don’t address the action specifically.

Editing Broadcast Copy:
Even in this age of creating and editing a story on the computer and then watching that story turn into a hard copy on your printer, you’ll occasionally be forced to make “pen and ink” corrections. By following a few simple rules, you can ensure your copy remains readable.

INSERTING PUNCTUATION:
When you insert that missing period, quotation mark, comma, question mark, etc., neatly place the mark where it belongs.

CORRECTING SPELLING:
Never try to correct a letter within a word. Block out the misspelled word and write the corrected word on top of the block. There is no editing mark in broadcast copy to correct a single letter.

INSERTING WORDS OR PHRASES:
Insert a word or phrase by printing the word or words above the line and indicating where you want to insert it. Above all, be neat!

PHONE NUMBERS ON THE RADIO:

Giving phone numbers can work well in visual mediums. Your viewer is typically less distracted, and you can show the number on the screen. These elements can help your audience remember the number. In radio, giving phone numbers is rarely justified. Your listeners’ attention is often divided with other activities, and they have no visual reference to help them remember. This is why listeners typically don’t remember phone numbers. Mentioning a phone number in radio content would be necessary if the message is about the number itself (e.g., a ride service phone number, a Crime Watch Tip Line, or an announcement about a changing phone number). In those cases, you’d include the number and maybe even repeat it.

What listeners remember is the name of the organization. They are more likely to remember to contact the Red Cross than to remember the actual Red Cross number. References like, “For more information, call . . . .” are often meaningless statements because you’ve usually already identified the organization. It’s justified to mention them if the point-of-contact for the information has not been identified in the copy (e.g., Grab a fork for the 5th Annual Big Brisket Dinner at the Garmish Community Center. For more information, call the U-S-O.). In most cases, advising your audience to call for information is a weak action step because the purpose of the information is not to drive your listeners to the phone. Your action step should state the specific action you want them to take. You can and should use the direction to “call” for your action step if your audience needs to call for a required result (e.g., call to register or call to reserve a booth). Then, tell them to call and why.

Similar guidance also discourages giving out Internet web addresses on the radio unless they are extremely easy to remember. For example, “Just go to Spots-For-Dummies-dot-com.”

Note: Phone numbers and “For more information, call...” are not the best examples of radio copy if they don’t have strong justification.

ENGLISH GRAMMAR REVIEW

1. The eight parts of speech are:
   - Noun
   - Pronoun
   - Verb
   - Adverb
   - Adjective
   - Conjunction
   - Preposition
   - Interjection

2. What is a noun?
   - A noun is a word that can be the name of:
     - A person - boy, girl, Rita, etc.
     - An animal - bull, horse, Trigger, etc.
     - A place - island, city, Baltimore, etc.
     - A thing - map, sea, sun, etc.
     - An event - marriage, graduation, murder, etc.
     - An idea or concept - war, peace, virtue, etc.
   - A subject is the primary noun or pronoun in the sentence

3. What is a verb?
   - A verb is a word that expresses an action, state, or condition
   - Verb form (the way it is spelled) changes according to:
     - Tense: present, past, future, etc.
       (Discussed in main style guide, page 4)
     - Person: 1\textsuperscript{st}, 2\textsuperscript{nd}, 3\textsuperscript{rd}
       (Discussed in main style guide, page 5)
     - Number: singular or plural
       (Discussed in main style guide, page 5)
     - Voice: active or passive
       (Discussed in main style guide, page 5-8)
     - Mood: Form of the verb that shows the attitude of the writer/speaker
       - Indicative (Used to state a fact or opinion or ask a question)
         - “The game begins at 7:00.”
         - “What time is it?”
       - Imperative (Expresses a command or warning or makes a request)
         - “Get ready to sail!”
         - “Let’s get out of here!”
       - Subjunctive (Reverses basic rules for tense)
• “If I were you, I’d see the Commander right away.”
• “I demanded that the Airman come to see me.”
• “He’s so fine; wish he were mine.”
• Some texts include Infinitive and Participial as moods

A participle is verb that writers use as either part of a verb phrase (has written), a modifier (the well-written document), or the first word in a participial phrase (Written by Mark Twain, the book contained references to the Old South.).

4. What is a pronoun?
   • A pronoun is a word used in place of one or more nouns
   • There are seven types of pronouns:
     • Personal - “I am going to the store.”
     • Reflexive - “He saw himself in the mirror.”
     • Interrogative - “Who is coming?”
     • Demonstrative - “That is beautiful.”
     • Possessive - “The house is mine.”
     • Relative - “The God who made the universe is all-powerful.”
     • Indefinite - “Someone is coming.”

5. What is an adjective?
   • An adjective is a word that modifies a noun or a pronoun
   • There are five types of adjectives:
     • Descriptive - “Steph is a fast runner.”
     • Possessive - “Jenny loves her papa.”
     • Interrogative - “Which sax is Amanda’s?”
     • Demonstrative - “That woman is my wife.”
     • Infinite - “Some people are lucky.”
   NOTE: The articles (a, an, & the) are considered adjectives. “A” and “an” are called “indefinite” articles and can only be used in the singular sense. “The” is called the “definite” article because it is usually used to refer to a specific person, place, or thing.

6. What is an adverb?
   • An adverb is a word that modifies a verb, an adjective, or another adverb
   • Adverbs indicate manner, quantity, time, place, and intensity
     • Adverbs of manner answer the question “how”, e.g., “The fire rapidly consumed the barracks.”
       (Very common adverbs recognized by their “ly” ending)
     • Adverbs of quantity, degree, or intensity answer the question of “how much” or “how well”, e.g., “The squad advanced fearfully.”
     • Adverbs of time answer the question “when”, e.g., “The president plans to announce his Bosnian policy soon.”
     • Adverbs of place answer the question “where”, e.g., “The police found the convict under the bridge.”
7. What is a conjunction?
   - A conjunction is a word that joins words or groups of words.
   - There are three types of conjunctions:
     - Coordinating (and, but, or, nor, yet, and for)
     - Subordinating (although, because, if, that, etc.)
     - Correlative (coordinating conjunctions used in pairs - either/or; etc.)

   NOTE: There are also “conjunctive adverbs.” These are actually adverbs that act as conjunctions to connect complete ideas. Examples are “therefore”, “furthermore”, and “however.” The use of conjunctive adverbs is discouraged in broadcast writing.

8. What is a preposition?
   - A preposition is a word that shows the relationship between a noun or pronoun and another word in the sentence.
   - Prepositions may indicate position, direction, time, manner, means, or agent.
   - Prepositions combine with “objects of the preposition” to form prepositional phrases.
   - Prepositional phrases can:
     - Show position (“Police kept the convict in the basement.”)
     - Show direction (“The robber gave the money to the police.”)
     - Show time (“Superman lived on Krypton for many years.”)
     - Show manner (“The chief acted with disgust.”)
     - Show means (“The boy hit the dog with a stick.”)
     - Show agent (“The student was given a failing grade by the instructor.”)

9. What is an interjection?
   - An interjection is an expression of strong feeling or emotion.
   - Words that do not fulfill any function of the other 7 parts of speech.
     - Frequently used (“Man, am I hungry!”)
     - Not properly part of the sentence structure (“Yes, I’ll do it”)
     - Separated from the main clause by a comma (“Ah, she is beautiful.”)

10. Sentences, Phrases and Clauses
    - A sentence is the expression of a thought that usually consists of at least a subject and a verb.
    - Sentence types include: simple, compound, complex, and compound-complex.
      - Simple is self-explanatory
        - "The Air Force grooms the best NCOs in the U.S. military."
        - "Green Bay won." (no object)
      - Compound consists of two simple sentences joined by a coordinating conjunction.
        (“Emmett fell on his face, and Troy landed on his bottom.”)
      - Complex has a main clause and one or more subordinate clauses.
        (“Although the Packers were beaten, Brett played well.”)
      - Compound-complex contains at least two main clauses, and at least one subordinate clause. DO NOT use these sentences in broadcast writing!
    - A phrase consists of two or more words that express a thought, but without a subject or a conjugated verb. You can identify the phrase by the type of word at its beginning.
- "Jon will run the race with his son." (prepositional phrase)
- "According to the Red Cross, the blood supply is critically low." (participial phrase)
- "You have the classroom near the door." (adjective phrase)
- "Ensure the students write in their own words." (adverbial phrase)
- "Don't try to win the race dishonestly." (infinitive phrase)
- "The day has begun." (verb phrase)

- A clause is a group of words that contains a subject and a conjugated verb
  - The clause can form part of a compound or complex sentence
  - There are two types of clauses
    - The main, or independent, clause (could stand alone)
      - “Before you tape your interview, you should thoroughly check your equipment.”
      - “Chief Louis lost the interview because she showed up late.”
    - The subordinate, or dependent, clause (not a complete sentence)
      - "Lindsay won the race because he came in first."
      - “If A1C Donald passes broadcast writing, he’ll go to radio.”
“SINS” AND “TIPS” OF
BROADCAST WRITING

“DOZEN’ DEADLY SINS”:

1. Don’t start a story with “as expected”
   (Don’t listeners tune in to hear the “unexpected”?)
2. Don’t start a story with “in a surprise move”
   (Isn’t news full of “surprises”?)
3. Don’t start a story by saying someone “is making news,” “is in the news,” or “is dominating the news”
   • Just tell what’s happening
   • Isn’t everyone you mention in the newscast “making news,” etc.?
4. Don’t start a story by saying, “A new development tonight in the....”
   (If it’s not new, or a new development, it probably isn’t news)
5. Don’t characterize news as “good,” “bad,” “interesting,” or “disturbing”
   • Let your listener decide if it’s good, bad, etc.
   • Was the plunge in oil prices good news for folks in Texas?
6. Don’t start a story with a participial phrase or a dependent clause
   • We don’t talk that way
   • It can cause copy to become “weak and murky”
   • Can cause confusion
   • S-V-O (subject-verb-object) order is the best pattern for your first sentence
7. Don’t start a story with a quotation
   (Your listeners will presume the words are those of the announcer)
8. Don’t start a story with any form of the verb “to be”
   • They’re dead phrases that employ linking verbs
   • Use active verbs in the active voice
9. Don’t start a story with the name of an unknown or unfamiliar person
   • Is the unknown person the reason you’re telling the story?
   • Most stories don’t even need a name
10. Don’t start a story with a personal pronoun
    (“It” is a “premature” (vague) pronoun)
11. Don’t start a story with “another,” “more,” or “once again”
    (Why listen to more of the same?)
12. Don’t start a story with a sentence that has a “no” or “not”
    • People respond more positively to positive statements
    • “Recast” the negative into a positive
13. Don’t write a first sentence that uses “yesterday”
    (Yesterday is gone ... update that lead to read from today’s perspective)
14. Don’t write a first sentence that uses the verb “continues”
    (It doesn’t tell your listener anything new)
15. Don’t cram too much information into a story
    (Your audience simply cannot process the constant flow of facts)
16. Don’t use newspaper constructions
   (Attribution before assertion)
17. Don’t lose or fail to reach a listener
   - Talk to your listener, not at him
   - Understand that good writing is hard work
   - “Easy writing, hard listening. Hard writing, easy listening.”
18. Don’t make a factual error
   (Causes a loss of authority and credibility)

“VENIAL’ SINS”:

1. Don’t use pre-fabricated phrases – they quickly become boring and trite
   - “It’s official,” “It shouldn’t come as any surprise,” “Believe it or not,” etc.
   - “Police are investigating,” “Only time will tell,” “Don’t count him out yet,” etc.
   - “In a prepared statement,” “In an abrupt about-face,” “None the worse for wear,” etc.
2. Don’t waste words – it’s a waste of time and waters down what you say
   - “literally’ walked off the field
   - “suddenly’ fell off the bridge”
   - “flatly’ denied”
3. Don’t use non-broadcast words
   - Don’t use a word that’s not likely to be readily understood by almost all listeners
   - If you suspect a word is a “non-broadcast” word, you’re probably right
4. Don’t use hollow words – they do nothing but take up time
   - “the shooting ‘incident’” is just “the shooting”
   - “thunderstorm ‘activity’” is better stated “thunderstorms”
5. Don’t use vague words
   (if someone is “involved” in the crime, did they commit it or are they the victim?)

6. Don’t use weasel words
   (If a rape occurred, be specific ... call it a rape, not an “attack”)

7. Don’t use windy words
   - Find the simple synonym
   - “commence” becomes “start”
   - “city” for “metropolis”
   - “use” instead of “utilize”

8. Don’t use weary words
   - A weary word is one that’s been “used up”
   - “Controversy” and “controversial” are two examples

9. Don’t use wrong words
   - Ensure you know what a word means before you use it
   - A “dilemma” is two alternatives, equally undesirable, not a problem, plight, or predicament

10. Don’t use foreign words and phrases
    (Many people have a hard enough time understanding English)

11. Don’t resort to clichés
    - One cliché is not worth a thousand words
    - Do the police really “have their work ‘cut out’ for them”?
    - Do people really “‘huddle’ behind closed doors”?

12. Don’t stretch for synonyms for words that are easily understood
    - Even if it does mean using the same word twice in a story, or even a sentence
    - Do “explains” and “says” really mean the same?

13. Don’t “hotrod”
    (“Hotrodding” is “high power” writing)
“TOP TIPS OF THE TRADE”:

1. Start strong. “Well begun is half done.”
   (Your first words may determine if your listeners keep listening)
2. Read — and understand — your source copy.
   (Ensure you understand something BEFORE you use it)
3. Underline or circle key facts.
   (Allows you to instantly see what’s important & keep track of important facts)
4. Don’t write yet. Think.
   (Take time to think — even if it’s just for 30 seconds)
5. Write the way you talk — unless you’re from the Bronx!
6. Apply the rules for broadcast newswriting.
   (Don’t try to cram the five “w’s” up front)
7. Have the courage to write simply.
8. Refrain from wordy windups.
   (Tell your stories; don’t write them)
   (Let your listeners know who’s behind the assertions at the outset)
   (That’s the way we speak)
11. Limit a sentence to one idea.
   (This helps reduce difficult, complex stories to their essence)
12. Use short words and short sentences.
   (The words most of us use most frequently are short.)
13. Use familiar words in familiar combinations.
   (That’s the way the audience is accustomed to hearing them)
14. People-ize your copy.
   (Write about people, not personnel ... people want to hear about people)
15. Activate your copy.
   (Use verbs that move (action verbs) and avoid passive voice)
16. Avoid a first sentence whose main verb is any form of “to be.”
   (It conveys no action)
17. Avoid may, might, could, should, seems.
   (These linking verbs are even weaker than the “to be” family)
18. Put your sentences in a positive form.
   (Accentuate the positive ... try to avoid “no” and “not”)
19. Use present tense verbs where appropriate.
   (The verb that you can most often use in the present tense is say)
20. Don’t start with a quotation or a question.
   (Your listener may think the words are your own)
21. Use connectives — and, also, but, so, because — to link sentences.
   (This makes it easier to follow the thread of your story)
22. Put the word or words you want to emphasize at the end of your sentence.
   (A word placed at the sentence’s end gains emphasis and is remembered)
23. Use contractions — with caution.
   (They’re conversational, but may cause confusion, e.g., can’t, which might be heard as can.)
24. Pep up your copy with words like new, now, but, says.
   (They signal a listener he’s hearing news and can compress a mouthful into one word)
25. Watch out for I, we, our, here, up, down.
   (They can confuse.)
26. Omit needless words.
   (You can often delete words with no loss in meaning and gain clarity)
27. Hit only the main points; trash the trivia.
   (Ensure every word you use is essential)
   (Rewrite news stories in your own words)
29. Place the time element, if you need one, after the verb.
30. When in doubt, leave it out.
   (Deal only in facts, not in conjecture)
31. Don’t raise questions you don’t answer.
   (Don’t include a fact that is unclear)
32. Read your copy aloud. If it sounds like writing, rewrite it.
   (What matters is how your copy sounds, not how it looks on paper)
33. Rewrite. The art of writing lies in rewriting what you’ve already written.
   (Check facts; get rid of clutter; ensure the words are in the right order, etc.)
